Invitation

ZHANG Jiabao Academician
Vice President, International Union of Soil Sciences
President, Soil Science Society of China

Dear colleagues,

On behalf of the Organizing Committee, I am honored to extend our heartfelt invitation for you to attend the 23rd World Congress of Soil Science (23rd WCSS), to be held from June 7 to 12, 2026, in Nanjing, China. We warmly look forward to your presence at this landmark global academic gathering.

Since its inception in 1927, the WCSS has convened every four years and has grown into the world's most influential academic platform in soil science. In 2018, the Soil Science Society of China (SSSC) was granted the honor of hosting the 2026 Congress—marking the first occasion the event will be held in China. It is a proud milestone to bring this international forum to Nanjing, a city rich in history and cultural heritage.

The Congress is expected to bring together a diverse array of participants, including researchers, practitioners, corporate representatives, policymakers, regulatory agencies, academic institutes, students, and all stakeholders committed to the sustainable management of soils. It will provide an unparalleled platform for scientific exchange and interdisciplinary collaboration to address pressing challenges concerning soil and the environment.

Located on the western edge of the Yangtze River Delta, Nanjing, the capital of Jiangsu Province, is one of China's four great ancient capitals. Today, it stands as a vibrant hub of politics, education, culture, industry, economy, and tourism in the region.

We sincerely look forward to welcoming you to 23rd WCSS in Nanjing and joining hands to further the global cause of soil science.

Congress Overview

The 23rd World Congress of Soil Science (23rd WCSS) will be held in Nanjing from June 7 to 12, 2026. Held once every four years, the congress is known as the “Olympics” of international soil science community. Its inaugural landing in China in 2026 marks not only a milestone in WCSS’s century journey in soil science, but also presents a key opportunity for global scholars to engage in dialogues around the theme of “Soils and the Shared Future for Humanity”.

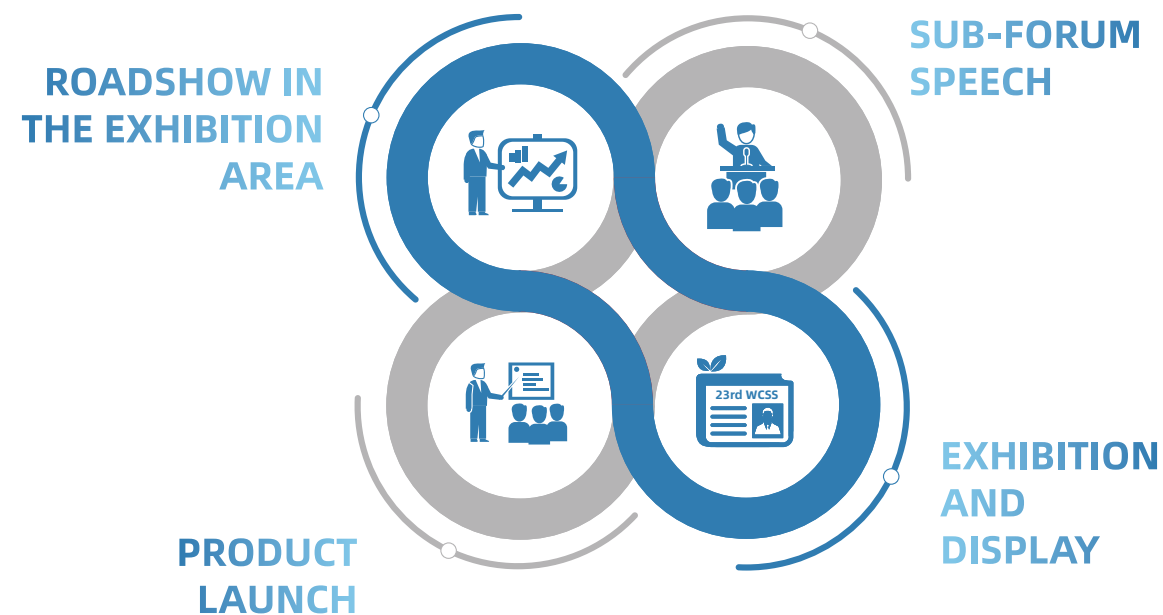

Since its inaugural forum in Washington D.C. in 1927, the WCSS has evolved into the world’s most influential soil science gathering. China began its engagement with the WCSS in 1935. At the largest-to-date 2018 Rio de Janeiro Congress which attracted over 4,000 scholars worldwide, nearly 300 Chinese participants (or 7% of the total) participated and the SSSC successfully bid to host the 2026 event. The 2022 Glasgow Congress featured a speech by Prince Charles, while at the 2024 Centennial Congress of the International Union of Soil Sciences (IUSS), China fielded the largest non-host delegation (nearly 200 members) and chaired multiple sub-forums. These milestones signal China’s rise as a leading and innovative force in global soil science community, laying robust foundation for the upcoming 2026 congress.

This congress has received strong support from the State Council, the Chinese Academy of Sciences, the Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Affairs, the China Association for Science and Technology, and the Nanjing Municipal People’s Government. It will be held in Nanjing International Expo Center at the foot of Zijin Mountain. It is expected to welcome 4,000 participants, comprising around 1,500 international representatives and 2,500 domestic representatives. The theme of the congress, which combines academic advancements with practical applications, is highly in line with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals, as well as China’s strategies for national food security, ecological civilization development and rural revitalization. It represents not only an academic feast, but also a testament to humanity’s shift from “resource plundering” to protecting the “community of life” in terms of soil knowledge. In May 2025, the congress has received more than 120 session proposals, and in July, it opened global registration and abstract submission.

In June 2026, let us gather in Nanjing to unlock the soil code for a sustainable civilization!

Venue Introduction

The 23rd World Congress of Soil Science, the premier global event in the field of soil science, will be held at Hall 5 of the Nanjing International Expo Center.

Spanning a total area of 12,000 square meters, the venue provides ample space for international exhibitors to present cutting-edge soil research technologies, soil remediation equipment, soil samples and related documentation. It will be a great opportunity to highlight the diversity and inclusivity of the global soil science community.

Within this, the net exhibition area covers 3,204 square meters, offering exhibitors a spacious, thoughtfully arranged environment to present their innovations. Whether through compelling visuals, live demonstrations, or immersive multimedia experiences, each exhibitor has the opportunity to highlight their strengths, engage meaningfully with participants, and bring their stories to life.

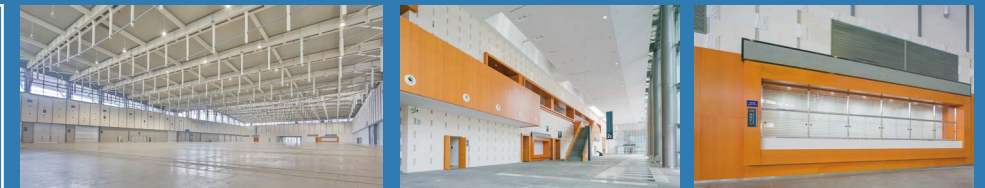

This is more than an exhibition— it's a crossroads for scientists, scholars, industry leaders, and professionals from around the world. The congress fosters direct dialogue, collaboration, and exchange. It's an unparalleled platform to showcase technological prowess, build brand awareness, explore market opportunities, and stay attuned to the latest developments in the field.

To ensure a seamless experience, the organizing committee has assembled a professional team to oversee all aspects of the event — from early-stage planning and coordination to on-site operations and logistical support — guaranteeing an efficient, orderly, and inspiring environment for all participants.
